Blue-Green Algae Identified at West Loon Lake

The Ministry of the Environment, Conservation and Parks has confirmed the presence of blue-green algae in a water sample collected at West Loon Lake on August 24 2023. It is important to remember that water should be avoided whenever a blue-green algae bloom is present, and for about 2 weeks after it has dissipated.

When blue-green algae is present in water, it is important to avoid drinking the water, using it for household purposes, or swimming in it. Keep pets away from the water as well, as their smaller size and propensity for drinking lake water makes them more vulnerable.

Blue-green algae are microscopic organisms that are naturally present in lakes and streams. They are usually present in low numbers but can rapidly increase in warm, shallow, surface water that gets a lot of sun. When this happens, they can form blooms that make the water look like green pea soup or turquoise paint. When the bloom is very large, the harmful algae bloom may form scum or solid-looking clumps on the water surface. Some blue-green algae blooms produce toxins that pose a health risk to people and animals when consumed, inhaled, or even from skin contact. If contact with a blue-green algae bloom does occur, wash with soap and water and rinse with clean water to remove the algae.

Blue-green algae blooms in lakes in our region have been relatively uncommon, historically. However, with rising climate and water temperatures they may become more common.

If you spot a suspected blue-green algae bloom, report it to the Spills Action Centre at 1-800-268-6060.

For more information on blue-green algae blooms, please visit the Ministry of the Environment, Conservation and Parks website at: <https://www.ontario.ca/page/blue-green-algae>. Questions about water sampling should be directed to the MECP office in Thunder Bay at 807-475-1205.

If you have questions about the health effects of blue-green algae blooms, please contact the Thunder Bay District Health Unit at 807-625-5900 to speak with a public health inspector.

Should I be worried about blastomycosis?

What is it?

Blastomycosis is an infection caused by breathing in spores of the soil fungus Blastomyces, and usually begins as a lung infection. It is not spread from person-to-person or from dogs to people. Signs of illness usually take up to three months to develop.

Where is it found?

Blastomyces is found across Ontario, with the highest rate of infection in the north. It grows in moist areas, often close to bodies of water such as lakes. The spores can be breathed in when soil or organic matter (such as leaf and wood piles) containing the fungus is disturbed or moved.

How will I know if I have blastomycosis?

Symptoms of blastomycosis include:

- A cough that won't go away
- Difficulty breathing
- Chest pain
- Fever or night sweats
- Unexplained weight loss
- Extreme fatigue

Blastomycosis is treatable. Mild blastomycosis can often be treated at home. However, if left untreated, the infection can become more severe, require hospitalization or even cause death. About half of people who become infected have no signs of illness and do not need treatment to recover.

What should I do if I have symptoms?

The symptoms of blastomycosis may be confused with other health conditions. If you have any of the symptoms that are listed, even if you have had them for a while, please see a health care provider as soon as possible and let them know that you are worried about blastomycosis.

Early diagnosis and treatment is the best way to prevent serious harm or death.
